

Karan Kaufman - 28

My first experience with physical therapy was as a patient in middle school when I tore my ACL and had to go for several months. Having been through that process myself, I feel like I can put myself in my patient's shoes and help them understand the process better.

Being a PT has been great as it allows me to put to use my love of human anatomy combined with customer service. I see a wide variety of patients from young athletes trying to get back in action quickly to older patients who need help for some of their more chronic conditions.
